

Val and Al

We are photographers living in Glastonbury, Somerset. We both love the natural and historic beauty of Somerset especially the Somerset Levels. We're very fortunate in having the Natural England reserve at Shapwick Heath and the RSPB nature reserve at Ham Wall right on our doorstep. Many of our images, in particular the spectacular starling murmurations, are taken at these beautiful locations. During their displays the starlings make amazing shapes, this fantastic aerial ballet has been described as natural bird art. All photos in this brochure are © avalonprints.uk.com

(C) Somerset Starlings

During their displays, when the starlings make their amazing shapes, this fantastic aerial ballet has been described as natural bird art.

WHAT IS A STARLING MURMURATION?

'Murmuration' is the name given to the large groups of Starling flocks. These huge flocks of birds gather together to roost through the winter months.

WHY IS IT CALLED A MURMURATION?

One that we have heard is that the noise of the starlings wings as they fly overhead sounds like a murmur. It is an amazing and breathtaking experience.

WHY DO THEY DO THIS?

It could be a form of protection from predators, huge numbers together could look threatening and also mean that it is more difficult for predators to single out one bird as prey. In some of our photos a predator can be clearly seen. Or it could also be a way of signposting a roost, some of the large murmurations can be seen from a long distance. Roosting together in huge numbers means that in the cold of winter, the body heat from thousands of starlings close together will raise the surrounding air by a few degrees. This could be life or death during the bitter cold winter nights.

WHAT TIME OF YEAR DOES THIS HAPPEN?

The Starling murmurations (the displays in the skies) happen during the winter months, roughly from mid/late October to mid March. The peak in numbers is usually December to January when more birds come over from Europe .

WHERE DO THE BIRDS ALL COME FROM?

The Starlings can fly for miles to get to their specific roost site, but while some of the birds are UK residents, the majority though will be migratory birds coming over from Europe. It seems the colder the winter is in Europe, especially if there are good Easterly winds assisting them, then that is when more numbers will appear and gather here.

WHAT TIME OF DAY DOES THIS OCCUR?

Most people associate Starling Murmurations with the evenings. Thousands of birds dancing together in patterns across the skies before dropping down in to their roost sites. These displays happen around the time of sun set each evening. During the evening roost time it is never guaranteed that the flocks of birds will dance or display, or even turn up in huge numbers all together. in fact sometimes they come in low over the ground and go straight to roost. If you do however go to one of the larger roost sites the following morning you are almost guaranteed a huge explosion of starlings as they take off in either one, two or three huge groups.

WHAT TIME DO THEY COME TO ROOST?

The time they come in and settle is around sun set. That time changes throughout the winter so an actual time cannot be stated, plus the time can vary due to several factors. Dull and cloudy evenings can make the birds come in a lot earlier whereas cloudless bright evenings will sometimes make them later. If we were giving anyone advice it would be to get in position at least an hour in advance of the sun set time, sit back, relax and wait.

DOES IT DEFINITELY HAPPEN EVERY NIGHT DURING THE STARLING SEASON?

Roosting Yes , but dancing murmuration patterns No.
